Music at Illinois State University

Illinois State University is a student-centered, multipurpose institution with over 20,000 students, committed to providing undergraduate and graduate programs which are of the highest quality in the State of Illinois. The Music Department consists of approximately 300 undergraduate music majors and 60 graduate majors. The 42 full-time faculty members provide students with a nurturing musical and personal environment. Students can pursue majors in music education, performance, music therapy, theory-composition, and create contract majors in music business and music theater. In addition, ISU has one of most advanced programs in arts technology available in the United States. ISU has a strong choral tradition with this fall will being the 44th year of annual Madrigal Dinners. All of the seven choral groups on campus are open through audition to students from all majors.
